Personal Statement

Being partner in the Good e-Guidance Stories project and part of the Digital Leadership Group is a great opportunity to identify my own needs in terms of digital upskilling and further development of my digital competencies.

As a project manager in Ballymun Job Centre I can also support my IAG Guidance Practitioner colleagues who are involved in the GeGS project to complete digital Case Studies training and enhance their competencies to be able to better solve working challenges in digital environments and improve the accessibility, interaction and service provision with clients.

Occupational Profile

I am the Innovation Project Manager in Ballymun Job Centre (BJC), EU projects coordinator and main contact point for the majority of EU projects the BJC are currently partners in. He has 5 years of experience managing Erasmus+ projects in different sectors, including formal and informal education, tackling a range of themes and priorities. I have previous experience in the voluntary sector, guidance support and curriculum development, with a great awareness about Information and Data Literacy, as well as functional use of digital tools and platforms that have been sufficient for my work until the Covid19.

Since the pandemic I have upskilled and developed my competences to be able to work remotely, particularly in terms of communication and collaboration, and digital content creation. Although I have always been creative and solution oriented, there is always new approaches to work and learning from others, and this can also be done virtually!

My current challenge is to improve my competences around digital safety. Currently BJC is implementing a comprehensive cyber security training to be completed in the following weeks, I am looking forward to learning more and re-assess my knowledge to be able to contribute further to the GeGS project.

Ireland, March 2022.
